

They divide the nation with their love it or hate it taste. To some, they are the king of meat products and the perfect accompaniment to a pint; for others they're the lowest of the edible low. But pork pies are a British culinary institution and a group of men in Ripponden, near Halifax, has spent more than 25 years giving them the recognition they deserve.

These dedicated connoisseurs are members of the Pork Pie Appreciation Society, which meets every Saturday night in Ripponden's Old Bridge Inn. For more than two decades they have stoically 6694 The group at the pub, including the man who is the subject of the other photos.

© 2008 Yorkshire in December 2008. All rights reserved. This document is the property of Yorkshire in December 2008. It is to be used for personal use only. No part of this document may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, without the prior written permission of Yorkshire in December 2008.

